Indian Home-Making. [E. L. Dorsey in The Current.]

One of the new experiments at Hampton this year is taking several young married couples from different Indian tribes, and teaching them how to make a home. It has been very successful, and the dawning gentleness of the men to their wives and children, the new tenderness and pride of the women, their eagerness to learn how to sew, and their pleasure in cleanliness, are encouraging in every way. It is funny, and yet touching, to see the men with their children, their awkwardness in handling them, and yet their determination to carry the heavy youngsters and share the care of them with their squaws. And these are not the Creeks or Cherokees, but the warlike Sioux and Omahas.

Grandmother Garfield.

[Washington Letter.] Dr. Susan Edson, who attended Gen. Garfield all through his last illness and who had been for years an attendant upon the family, was in the White House for several weeks before the assasination. She was there for the purpose of looking after Mrs. Garfield, who was very ill at that time. Gen. Garfield's mother was summoned during this illness of Mrs. Garfield. When the latter began to grow better "Grandma Garfield" made ready to go home. When the time came for her to go she seemed oppressed with a great melancholy. She was so unusually sad at the prospect of parting with her son that he put his arm around her and in his most cheerful way tried to comfort her. While he was engaged in comforting her his wife began to urge him to accept an invitation he had to go down the river for a short trip. His wife insisted that he needed the rest and, as she was out of all danger, she would be better pleased to have him go than not. Grandma Garfield here spoke up and said: "Oh, James, don't go! I'm so afraid you will be shot if you go away from here now" It was this fear that has made her so sad at the parting with her son, as it afterward appeared for the last time. The last thing she said to her son before going away was to urge upon him the neces sity of using great precautions against the Mr. C. M. > FUOU FIRST BRU FACTY ARRESTMENTS [Chicago Herald.]

The top step of the flight leading up to the city hall in New York is a pulpit from which many preachers expatiate on Sunday. There is a small park in front of the edifice, and unless the weather is too inclement there are nearly always a good many wanderers near at hand who will listen if somebody will sing and preach. One recent Sunday an Episcopalian, a Baptist, and a Methodist exorter held forth, one after the other, and the loungers were about to separate, when a brisk old man mounted the steps and, with a loud voice, exclaimed: "I preach the gospel of breal. People who are hungry can get something to eat here every Wednesday and

That was a good while to wait if a man was really hungry, but the speaker went on to explain that while his particular mission was a Christian one it held to the principle that no man could be thoroughly good and at the same time desperately hungry. He wanted everybody who was hungry to come and be fed, and he would talk of salvation afterward. This seemed to suit the sentiments of his auditors, for they applauded him vigorously and agreed to come and see him. In discussing the matter afterward the old man said his mission had distributed this year fifty-nine barrels of flour, 650 pounds of coffee, 960 loaves of bread, twelve chests of tea, 9,900 pounds of meal, 5,000 pounds of hominy, 425 pounds of potatoes, 30,000 pounds of beans, and 25,000 pounds of fresh fish. He was very enthusiastic in his work, and declared that he was making more converts than all the high-priced clergymen in the city put together.

The evolutionists tell us that new organs and powers were developed in the lower stages of animal life because of strong and long continued efforts to acquire this power or these organs. In the same way man is developing the power of spiritual perception through a mighty desire to know something of spirit, of life beyond this life; and I believe he is gaining the power to perceive and know facts and truths heretofore unrecognizable by any of the senses or organs possessed by him.
